Forget me not. When the first star with brilliance bright, Gleams lonely o'er the arch of night; When the bright moon dispels the gloom, And various are the stars that bloom, And brighten as the sun at noon, Forget me not.

Forget-Me-Nots. Jean Starr Untermeyer.
For Amy Lowell We walked through garden closes Languidly, with dragging Sunday feet, And passed down a long pleached alley, And could remember, as one remembers in a fairy tale, Ladies in brocade, and lovers, and musk. We surprised tall dahlias That shrugged and turned scarlet faces to the breeze.

Inspiring Poetry~Forget Me Not

So free must be forget-me-not. Give me the flame no dampness dulls, The passion of the instinctive pulse, Love steadfast as a fixed star, Tender as doves with nestlings are, More large than time, more strong than death: This all creation travails of —. She groans not for a passing breath —.
